Letter to Shareholders

March 25, 2024

Dear Shareholder,

At the drafting of my annual shareholder's letter last year, we were in the midst of an eventful March. There had been a handful of specialty bank failures and our government friends were reacting accordingly. As it turned out, the potential contagion of fear created by these matters was managed well, and the banking industry remarkably avoided the headlines for the balance of 2023. We are fortunate that the choices of these banks that ultimately failed were a world away from traditional community banking. I am happy to share in this letter that Southern had a comparatively uneventful but productive year in 2023.

Our industry entered 2023 on the heels of a unique 2022 that saw rapid action taken by the Federal Reserve to quell inflation after a 15-year period of historically low rates. After increasing the federal funds rate by 4.25 percent in the previous 12 months, their efforts continued in 2023 with four additional 0.25 percent federal funds rate increases. However, by most measures, consumer and commercial spending continued at a healthy pace for most of the year.

The trillions of dollars in pandemic related funding placed into our economy will continue to create distortions in our industry for several years. As a case in point, commercial bank deposits have declined nearly $1 trillion since the second quarter of 2022 as excess pandemic funds gradually find more permanent homes in our economy.

The aggression of the Federal Reserve's efforts with interest rates has caused an inversion in the yield curve that started on July 5, 2022 and remains so at the date of this letter. This is the longest yield curve inversion period since the 1970s. Conventional wisdom is that these curve inversions will typically forestall a recession, but that has not yet become clear. To the contrary, the Federal Reserve's efforts to engineer a 'soft landing' for our economy have, so far, appeared effective without a harsh reduction in economic activity.

As discussed in previous annual letters, the community banking business model is based on providing local depository services and being able to re-invest those funds in our communities for longer terms in the form of loans. These yield curve inversions impact that model because funding costs related to deposits often rise at a faster pace than the yield derived from earning assets.

With this setting as a backdrop, Southern Bank weathered the environment comfortably. The fundamental value to our company of having a generational and relationship-based deposit portfolio became even clearer, as we grew our loan portfolio by 9.07 percent and our asset quality remained exceptionally strong. We experienced a modest deposit decline of 0.29 percent in a year when, as previously noted, nearly $1 trillion of commercial bank deposits left the banking system.

The Company reported healthy core earnings of $37.5 million during 2023 and total earnings, which includes the impact of the increase in value of our equity securities portfolio, of $148.4 million. Return on average shareholders' equity was 40.21 percent for 2023, or 10.15 percent on a core earnings basis. We continue to hold a sizable equity securities portfolio that is carried at fair value. As illustrated on page 4, during 2023, the portfolio increased in value by $110.9 million, after tax, compared to a $13.3 million after-tax decline in value in 2022.

We understand that by holding these investments we may experience earnings volatility from year to year. However, given the $316.0 million value as of December 31, 2023, compared to our $27.0 million cost basis in these investments, we view these as sound long-term investments that have generated significant value for our shareholders. The majority of our holdings have been held for decades.

Our company continues to maintain a highly-liquid balance sheet. Southern Bank has the ability to fund the withdrawal of every single dollar of uninsured or uncollateralized deposits without the need to sell a single investment security from our investment portfolio. These available sources of liquidity have been in place for many years and are tested regularly.

Southern BancShares and Southern Bank both remain well-capitalized under all regulatory capital measures. Our company maintains a healthy and cooperative working relationship with its regulatory and supervisory agencies, which we believe further contributes to our strength and stability.

Our company continued seeking new opportunities for growth in 2023, expanding into the Richmond, Virginia market with the opening of a loan production office. This move replicated the previously successful expansion strategies leveraged by our company into other high growth markets that have served us well over the years.

We continue to remain focused on providing a distinctive banking experience to our customers, whether they are in our smallest markets or in the most densely populated areas we serve. We believe that leading with a people-first approach to building relationships is a foundational element of distinction for our company. Combining this approach with thoughtful and intentional investments in technology enables us to provide the distinctive, personable experience that embodies Southern Bank.

The bank also remains focused on providing a distinctive workplace culture and experience for its employees. In late 2022, Southern Bank introduced its employees to the Southern Hardship Assistance Relief Program, Inc. (SHARP). SHARP is a non-profit entity that was created to provide both Southern Bank and its employees the opportunity to provide support for other employees who are suffering financial strain due to catastrophic or health-related events.

The SHARP program enjoyed a successful first full year in 2023 with great support from our team. The program is administered by employees with funding provided from voluntary contributions and additional support provided by Southern. SHARP is a byproduct of the unique and distinctive family culture that embodies our organization. I am grateful for the employee board that administers the program and for how our bank family supports its own in need.

In closing, as we pivot from 2023, we head into 2024 focused on the opportunities before us. Our company remains favorably positioned to perform on the competitive landscape across our market footprint. We firmly believe that our strength and stability combined with the distinctively personable banking experience we deliver are the keys to our success and continued longevity.

As always, we wish to express our sincere gratitude to our clients, associates and stakeholders for their continued dedication and loyalty to our company.

Sincerely,

Drew Covert
